

History

Brown Sardina, Inc. was founded in 1996 by William Brown and Michael Sardina after serving together as principals for more than 25 years in an internationally recognized Landscape Architectural firm. During that time, they lived in California, Texas, Florida, and Boston, where they worked on projects throughout the United States and foreign countries, providing them the broadest exposure afforded in the profession, enhancing their professional experience and perspectives, and associating them with numerous award winning projects.

Since its founding, Brown Sardina has continued its diverse practice of: master planning large tracts of land for multiple uses, urban design projects of various complexities and scales, and a rich variety of site planning and landscape architectural implementation projects.

The success of Brown Sardina is manifested in its numerous repeat clients and depth of its personnel, reflecting our commitment to excellent professional service to our clients and to creating a better environment for all.
